Dukane's New Technical Center In Querétaro, Qro, Mexico

Dukane, St. Charles, IL continues its commitment to international expansion with the launch of a new Technical Center at Santiago de Querétaro, QRO, Mexico. Strategically located in the center of Mexico, this new center will allow Dukane to provide cost effective plastic welding solutions, instant customer service and expedited delivery, to customers in Latin American countries.

"Queretaro is one of the major manufacturing hubs in Mexico and very well connects us with South American countries. Our new Technical Center will help us extend our product offerings to this growing market and stay close with our current and prospective customers in this region," says Jason Barton, National Sales and Marketing Manager at Dukane. He adds, "We are in the process of recruiting and training local engineers and sales reps, who will help us achieve the goals of providing excellent customer service with local expertise at this center."

Dukane is a global provider of welding equipment for joining thermoplastic materials and known in the industry for providing custom tooling and fixtures to meet unique requirements of each customer. This center will have tooling design and manufacturing capabilities to shorten delivery lead times for local customers. Evaluating plastic assembly feasibility, providing weld joint consultation and application engineering assistance will be other key services available at this facility. This facility will also be equipped to administer pre- and post-production support, such as prototype tooling, prototype part runs, pre-production part runs, final check out and part run-offs.
